

Abstract

The present invention relates to synthetic material comprising a network polymer. The material has a set of less than 0.1% after having been stretched to 300% of its original length for 10 minutes.